Mountain's Message

Teacher's Article

Every morning, when I rush to work, I never forget to stop my wheels at a certain place and watch a particular adventure. That place is a small mountain. The morning snow spread over it and the sight of the sun rising and reflecting its light is tremendous to experience. That scene is a feast to the eyes. We can't take our eyes away especially when the clouds take a temporary stay over that mountain. When I return home in the evening, watching the sun hiding behind the mountain, reminds me of the hide-and-seek game of my childhood. It is a tiny mountain. Not many trees are on it, but some trees stand tall. Despite the snow or rain, some people walking up the stairs to the mountaintop can be seen distinctly. We can only recognize people marching up that mountain in their colored clothes. I have always wondered why people hike this mountain though the weather conditions are not that congenial. But I convince myself that people might love it because of the mountain's steep stairs heading to the top.

To enjoy and admire nature, we have got plenty of adventurous entities. Mountains always hold a special place in them. Neither rivers nor rain are as noteworthy as mountains. At times, the rivers flow with a murmur and carry everything along, and in summer, they turn completely dry. But have a glimpse at the mountains, whatever the weather or climatic conditions may be, they stand still as great as they are.

If you like to know, why everyone is trekking up the mountain, you have to think a little beyond. One peculiar reason is, temples of all religions are generally located in the mountains. A few years ago, my friends and I climbed the mountain near Srivilliputhur. We started walking at 8 in the morning and walked till 1 in the afternoon to reach the top. We were exhausted though we carried only a water bottle when we reached the top. But it's hard to imagine, how the materials were brought up for constructing this temple where there's not even a pathway to this place and what made them construct a temple here.

Since time immemorial, people have been going towards the mountains for various reasons. One valid and strong reason is that people with a lot of complications in life head to the mountains looking for peace. To stay there for a short time or a few days away from all mess, without any interaction with the outside world, certainly gives you inner peace. It's a little difficult to climb mountains and we should harden ourselves and sheer will is needed. Every time we climb up the mountains, our mind pushes away its burdens just as our body does. That's the reason; some temples were built on mountains. It takes 500 steps to reach some temples on the mountain top and some mountain temples have no path to walk. Why do people go through so much trouble? If we have a goal and it's simple, we may not understand the joy in it.

What I say is that our path must be as quiet as mountains. We ought to be silent wherever we don't have to talk. We must hold our tongue wherever we realize our words will not be acknowledged. In the working world, there is always a witty conversation about management. Our friends might share their outlook on it, and I, on the other hand, come up with my opinion. But in the end, if it backfires on us, it will be embarrassing for us and our friends. Another place where we should be very quiet is in our family. We might say something unintentionally; it will lead to a dispute even after many years. A mountain stands still and carefree and is a wonder to the onlookers.

Senior Principal's Message

Mrs. Vijaya Sundar

Senior Principal

Greetings from KMR!

Reading is to mind what exercise is to the body....as the adage goes. For the kids of 60s to 80s, the time when no gadgets were introduced, READING was on the top of the HOBBY LIST. Long before the era of Harry Potter, there was one writer who enjoyed worldwide readership among children. It was none other than ENID BLYTON, a highly prolific British writer who penned more than 800 books, sold about 600 million copies in 90 languages. She was a phenomenon and a worldwide best-selling author even now. She is one of the few author brands whose works remain unshakable.

Along with Mark Twain and R.L. Stevenson, Enid Blyton was one of my childhood favorites.

Her birthday falls on August 11th, and here I am to reflect on her time honored works. Born in 1897, she started writing ever since she was 14. She took to full-time writing from 1924. There were just a few children s authors during those times and this made her all the more popular and there arose a great demand for her works. Her FAMOUS FIVE and SECRET SEVEN became household names

Famous Five series has 21 books to her credit and they speak in an engaging manner about the adventures of a group of children, JULIAN, DICK, ANNE, GEORGE and their dog TIMMY. They encounter smugglers, criminals, thieves, runways and mysterious people both good and bad. These books were so popular that the readers urged the publishers to start THE FAMOUS FIVE CLUB.

THE SECRET SEVEN series spoke about a fictional group of 7 child detectives. They held regular meetings, helped the community in many ways, and also solved mysteries. They had a badge, a secret pass word and a secret head quarters.. How I wished I were one of those secret seven solving mysteries! Such was the grip Enid Blyton had on her young readers! There are about 17 books in this series.

Some of her characters may appear stereotyped, but they taught clear moral lessons to the readers. Though her works are almost about a century old, they will stay in our mind for a very long time. Writing for children is an art and she had mastered it.

“When you are paid to do job, it is better to give a few minutes more to it than a few minutes less. That is one of the differences between doing a job honestly and dishonestly!” These words of Enid Blyton hold well not only for children but even for adults in any profession. Read BLYTON and relive your childhood!

Principal’s Message

Dear Readers of KMR 360⁰ Newsletter. I would like to share my message with a real time example. Tata had a friend who used to say that he misplaced and lost his pen very often. He would use only very cheap pens so that he need not worry about losing them. But he was worried about his habit of carelessness. JRD suggested that he should buy a costly pen he could afford and see what happens. He took up the idea and bought a 22 carat gold pen. After nearly six months JRD met him and asked him if he continued to misplace his pen. His friend said that he was very careful about his costly pen and Mr.Tata was surprised to see his friend had changed! JRD explained to him that the value of the pen made the difference and there was nothing wrong with him as a person!

Reflection

This is what happens in our life. We are careful with things we value the most in our life.

- If we value our health, we will be careful of what and how we eat;
- If we value our friends, we will treat them with respect;
- If we value money, we will be careful while spending;
- If we value time, we will not waste it; hence learn the power of value. It will change the way you look at things in life.
